

Seminar and Audience Discussion

Solidarities and Collective Action amongst Young Workers

Guest Speaker: Professor Mel Simms, Glasgow University

This seminar will discuss how young people experience work, how they resist precarious employment practices and how they participate in and build collective responses to their work.

Key points include:

- Collectivising into trade unions as one way for young people to express their interests and bargain with employers.
- When unions are able to respond with appropriate structures and approaches, young workers have been responsive to their messages.
- Constraints remain including resources, the commitment of the union at the highest levels and structural patterns of young people's employment, which present practical challenges to organising.

Thursday 30th May 2019 - 4pm – 5.30pm
UCLAN - GREENBANK BUILDING 170

Refreshments available from 3.30pm. Attendance is free.

To book a place please contact:

iroweresearch@uclan.ac.uk

Or register with Eventbrite:

<https://www.eventbrite.co.uk/e/solidarities-and-collective-action-amongst-young-workers-tickets-58985322688>

LANCASHIRE SCHOOL OF BUSINESS AND ENTERPRISE

